FROM FATHER PATRICK: Now that I am back working on a full schedule, yet with due respect for the demands of the recuperation process, I would like to thank again all the members the parish family who supported me in their prayers, in the cards they sent me and in the many tokens of affection I have received over the past few weeks. Thank you so much! Father Patrick

It is important that, should you know that a Catholic neighbour or relative is unwell and/or would appreciate receiving Holy Communion at home or a visit from the priest, that you please let Father Patrick know. Deacon Hugh Anscombe is very kindly visiting the house-bound at present and it is Father Patrick's hope that he can visit all parishioners who are confined to their homes during the course of Lent. He will administer to them the Sacrament of the Sick. But, please make him aware of those who could benefit from a visit. Thank you.

First Sunday of Lent (Year A – Matthew): Today we accompany Jesus into the desert. Since Ash Wednesday we have been maintaining a Lenten observance appropriate to our age, health and circumstances. We are aware that every day we face temptations and we are conscious that the Lenten invitation to conversion of heart is one which, when we respond to it wholeheartedly, implies changes to our lives. Even though traditional Lenten observance involves changes to our outer behaviour and people can observe what we are doing or refraining from, it is inner conversion that matters. We are living in a fast-changing world, we are easily made to feel insecure, temptation is ever present, fed on our fears. One of the greatest temptation in the present age is that we might lose our trust and faith in God. Lent's spiritual challenge is to us to deepen our faith in God and to put our trust totally in him.

First Reading (OT): Genesis 2, 7 – 9. 3, 1 – 7: It is the temptation story in this reading which arrests our immediate attention, especially in the light of the Gospel narrative recounting Jesus' temptation episode in the desert. But this passage also contains one of the two creation stories, in particular that of us human beings. On Ash Wednesday we were reminded that we were created out of dust and that ultimately into dust we shall return. God has fashioned us with his own hands. Dust itself is without form, it slips through our fingers, it is lifeless. And yet in God's hands, dust can be transformed into the hardest stone, and the human being is created. Out of nothing we have been fashioned into something, each a unique person, each infinitely precious to God.

Second Reading (NT): Romans 5, 12 – 19: This excerpt from Paul's great letter to the Christian community in Rome presents us with a summary of the salvation drama. Through one man (Adam – all humanity) sin entered the world, the relationship established by God at the dawn of creation had been fractured; and through another man, born from above but still one who called himself Son of Man, the victory over sin was won and the relationship with God restored.

Gospel: Matthew 4, 1 – 11: Is this story one of temptation, like we might be tempted by a chocolate éclair early in Lent when we had decided to forego chocolate for forty days, or is it one of being put to the test, an existential trial? In the OT all the great figures, Abraham, Moses and Jeremiah, had been put to the test by God. Indeed the author of the Letter to the Hebrews saw in this temptation episode in the life of Jesus a temptation which was subsequently to come to the assistance of others when they too were tempted. There has been a great debate recently over the way Pope Francis approved an alternative wording to the last phrase of the Our Father: "and lead us not into temptation." This Gospel narrative today helps us to think afresh about the role of temptation in our lives and what it did for Jesus.
